To whom this may concern,

I was first propelled into the world of law at the age of fifteen whilst participating in Transition Year. Offered as an optional module, the novelty of the subject and the fascinating topics promised to be covered intrigued me. I was aware my knowledge of the legal system was limited however, it was not until I completed the brief six-week synopsis that I came to the realisation of just how limited my knowledge was. Whilst the majority of my peers were content with this brief insight, I found myself infatuated and was determined to dive deeper. When the time rolled around to fill out my CAO application my mind was made up – a career in law was the career for me.

Byrne Wallace offers the opportunity to practice law at the highest level, in an intellectually challenging and personally fulfilling environment. From early on in my childhood it was evident that I was firm and resolute in arguing my case, a characteristic that continues to be true today. Working as a corporate solicitor would allow me the chance to work for high-profile clients, helping them to succeed on national and international levels, as well as working on cases which are of a public interest and discussed in news outlets.

I am extremely passionate about the law and have always had a strong interest in a career in corporate law. As an individual I am focused, competent and hard-working, all of which I believe contribute to my success in my undergraduate degree. Throughout my four years of study to date, I have gained an in-depth introduction to the Irish legal system. I believe that this knowledge has given me a firm footing to be of value in an established reputable firm such as Byrne Wallace. My aim is to obtain first-hand experience in this sector and apply some of the skills and theory that I studied throughout my degree. My consistent hard work throughout my undergraduate degree has given me a strong foundation to move forward and further expand my knowledge and ultimately contribute as much as possible to the world of law.

My undergraduate Bachelor of Laws - LLB degree at Maynooth University has been everything I hoped it would be and more. Every day I challenge myself to learn and push myself out of my comfort zone which ultimately results in my continual growth and development as an individual. They say that knowledge is of no real benefit unless you put it into action. Upon graduating I am determined my legal career would not be limited to my time in Maynooth. It is for this reason that I am applying for a summer internship at Byrne Wallace. I hope you take the time to consider me for any suitable positions. I look forward to hearing from you.

Many Thanks,

Glynn Ladley
