

Dear Sir/Madam

It is with great enthusiasm that I apply for a position in the ByrneWallace Summer Internship Programme for 2017. A final year business and law student at Dublin Institute of Technology, I am resolute in my ambition to establish myself as a well-trained solicitor in the Irish commercial sphere.

Hailing from a family of lawyers, the child 'me' grew up with a fairly realistic picture of the legal profession. I appreciated early on that a career in law indeed went far beyond the Hollywood's fascination with the DA's office. From communicating with family members I realise that the never ending presence of the commercial world around us is powered by the catalyst which corporate law provides. That client satisfaction is both a complex art but also pivotal. The hope of living this challenging professional life, alongside my need to develop the resilience and skills that this profession demands, has urged me to apply to ByrneWallace today.

ByrneWallace, indeed is a "forward thinking" law firm and its consistency in maintaining an impressive blue-chip clientele speaks volumes about the quality of its service. This firm's commitment towards upholding its values may well explain the reason behind its ranking amongst the top law firms in Europe. I am certain that linking my future to that of this firm shall be my absolute privilege. Furthermore, ByrneWallace is celebrated for its exceptional training development programme; and for reasons both mentioned and left unmentioned, I am very keen on securing this opportunity to intern at this firm.

I take pride in having acquired an array of interpersonal skills, though my experiences as a manager, a sales assistant and president of a society. I strive to add positively to any team I work with through my sincerity and efficiency. Conclusively I believe I possess the maturity, intellect, and drive to make for a diligent trainee fit for the work-culture of ByrneWallace; and for this reason, I see the opportunity to substantiate my claims through this internship.

Yours Sincerely
Haseeb Ul-Haque
