

I am not yet a fully formed solicitor, but I am the kind of man who takes pride in the work I do. If I am given a task I will complete it with accuracy and speed, not stopping until I feel the work reaches a certain standard. This is a new characteristic that I have begun to grow in me and I have not yet had the chance to fully show what I am capable of. Admittedly, I have been very middling most of my life, one which I lived without effort, but now I am ready to grow. I have a drive and ambition that can't be quenched until I am practising, successful solicitor and this internship is my first step.

Not only do I have the drive, I also have the skills necessary to be the kind of solicitor that your company needs. I have an incredibly analytical mind and am capable of coming up with logical conclusions and a reasonable argument for that deduction. However, I do feel that I need assistance with working on the speed of my analysis. This is one of the many things that I hope to learn in my weeks at 'Byrne/Wallace'. It's also one of the many reasons that I am such an ideal candidate for the role. I learn by taking part, not in a library. While I may not be the best candidate on paper, I can guarantee that you will see my skills grow exponentially as the weeks continue. I am truly an investment in your company's future.

'Byrne/Wallace' is the perfect company for me to grow and develop these skills, as it practices in such a wide variety of fields and their excellence is well known, not just by the (many) awards won, but by the countless satisfied clients. This is truly a remarkable firm and when I am awarded this internship I will not stop learning and growing until I am as remarkable as my employers. Thank you very much for taking the time to read through my application and I hope we have a chance to talk in person.

Sincerely,

Ian Reynolds
