To whom it may concern,

Attached is my CV which details my previous work experience and education, there is little point in remunerating that information so I will use this to tell you a little about myself and why I want to be a part of (ByrneWallace) and why a career in law interested me in the first place.

I am 21 years old from Dublin currently in my final year studying Law in The Technological University of Dublin. I went to CBC Monkstown for my secondary schooling. I am a very outgoing person; friendly and easy to get along with. I have a keen interest in an active lifestyle and my hobbies include surfing, playing golf and going to the gym. That is not to say I enjoy my down time by reading the likes of Dan Brown and listening to podcasts, mainly centred around a satirical look at politics and world events - "We need to talk about" and "Pod Save America". I am also massively interested in cooking and culinary arts and skills I can learn.

I knew from about Third Year in school onwards that I wanted to pursue a career in law and it has been an ambition ever since. I missed my first choice in the CAO by 5 points which at the time seemed like the end of it all but got into DIT studying law for 3 years. I see law as way to impact people's lives in the little and big things; whether it being helping a small company get off the ground or ensuring that big corporations do not exploit those who don't have someone to protect them.

ByrneWallace really stood out of the pack to me because of its reputation as 'par excellence' ensuring that your clients get exactly what they need. ByrneWallace also provides their interns with a great base knowledge of the legal system and what it would be like to work with you. There are opportunities that are not available elsewhere are available at ByrneWallace with membership in ALFA International and a large client base working with you would really provide the best basis on which to build my career in law. The open door policy with the partners in your firm really gives everyone a great chance to learn from the very best in the business and absorb knowledge which in other firms could be kept under lock and key.

In conclusion I would greatly appreciate an opportunity to work with you. It really would provide a great starting point for me in my law career by having an internship in ByrneWallace.

Sincerely,

Jack Clapham
