

Dear Sir/Madam,

My name is Michelle Brennan and I am writing in application for the position of Traineeship at ByrneWallace

At present I am a final year law student in Trinity College Dublin. The aforementioned position would be a fantastic opportunity for me to further develop and improve my experience and skills for a future career in law.

Having worked on nine week internship in another Dublin based corporate law firm, I have gained a solid grounding and insight into the working environment of a corporate legal practice. During my internship I gained a real cognizance and understanding into the fast-paced and dynamic nature of a working day of a legal practice and more importantly the work ethic and diligence expected by an intern/trainee.

I also gained experience in the daily tasks and routine, and was frequently responsible for filing, drafting letters, running postal errands, client liaisons and filing documents in the Four Courts and the Department of Foreign Affairs.

The position of trainee at ByrneWallace Law firm would be a tremendous opportunity. Not only to gain further experience in a legal practice but to also develop a knowledge and awareness in other areas of law that I have not yet had the opportunity to learn from.

Having progressed into fourth year, the prospect of a legal career comes closer to fruition. To me, this denotes the beginning of a journey through which I will learn the majority of my legal training. Experiences such as these I would consider the building blocks to my career and, as I look to potential firms in the hope of securing legal training there is nowhere I would rather learn 'the fundamentals' than at ByrneWallace

Eclectic is a word that best describe the firm. Its diversity, flexibility and corporate awareness are facets that immediately caught my attention, in addition to having profound place in the legal sector in Ireland.

The firms its ethos and vision and its people are aspects I would be proud to be associated with. Training with a firm of exceptional calibre and learning under the auspices of persons who are experts in their fields would be an experience of gold standards. The training programme facilitated by ByrneWallace, the emphasis and care taken in providing the best resource and guidance are aspects that are second to none.

The law is exciting, and the prospect of an internship with ByrneWallace is exciting. The firm's expertise in culmination with my enthusiasm, drive and keenness can only make for a promising traineeship.

I would like to thank you for considering my application.

Yours sincerely,

Michelle Brennan.
