My academic background, practical experiences, and personal values align seamlessly with the qualities and expectations I understand Byrne Wallace holds for its trainees. I am particularly drawn to the firm's commitment to delivering top-tier legal services while fostering a supportive and inclusive work culture.

As a qualified solicitor graduated in 2013 in the Republic of Venezuela, and as recent FE-1 Candidate at the Law Society of Ireland, I have honed my legal knowledge and research skills, preparing me to take on the challenges of the legal profession. My legal internship at PDVSA Petroleos, SA., where I was actively involved in case management, document preparation, and legal research, reinforced my dedication to the field.

What sets me apart as a candidate is my strong emphasis on mental and emotional well-being. I firmly believe that maintaining mental and emotional clarity is essential for providing the best legal counsel to clients, making sound ethical decisions, and fostering positive relationships. My resilience, empathy, and commitment to a healthy work-life balance are qualities that I am eager to contribute to your team.
