To whom it may concern,

I am writing to apply to the trainee solicitor programme at ByrneWallace as advertised on your website. I am currently in the final year of a law degree at Trinity College Dublin.

I was attracted to ByrneWallace because of the company's strong presence in the Irish legal sector, the strength of your traineeship programme and the opportunity for career advancement within the firm.

Training in ByrneWallace various practice areas will enable me to gain valuable experience working with motivated legal experts as part of a major corporate law firm. I am confident that I could make positive contributions to the work of your firm while at the same time strengthening the practical skills I will need to forge my career in corporate law.

I am interested in a career in law because of the unpredictability of the field. Every case will bring with it new intellectually challenging and stimulating material by raising different challenges and points within the law from previous cases. What particularly attracts me to the field of corporate law is the diverse practice areas I would have the opportunity to gain experience in, rather than being pigeonholed from the start of my career into one very narrow legal field. In addition I am fascinated by the world of business and the relationship between businesses and corporate law firms. A career in corporate law would place me at the heart of this complex relationship.

I hope to have the opportunity to interview with you about a traineeship position with ByrneWallace and am available to interview at any time. I look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

Sinead Mooney
