Dear Diana Diamond, Head of the Trainee Programme,

I am a twenty one year old Law student from DCU who is extremely interested in your internship programme. Byrne Wallace has a stellar reputation and I have heard through numerous channels that it is perhaps the best firm in Ireland to train in as a young solicitor. At the DCU Business fair this past month, your staff told me only positive things about the firm and I wish to be considered for this years intern programme.

As my Curriculum Vitae states, I would categorise myself as a mature, positive and hardworking individual, who always strives to achieve the highest standard possible, at any given task. Having played junior interprovincial and international sport all my life, I love being challenged and at the forefront of whatever task I can be. My leadership skills are shown multiple times in my supervisory roles as a coach and captain. I have also accrued excellent communication skills in my numerous jobs and a keen interest for competitive environments such as the law. My retail experience shows a commercial awareness and my numerous coaching roles show a dedication to hard work.

I believe I would fit in comfortably at an elite law firm such as Byrne Wallace, as I have the mental make up that you seek. My achievement show that I have become accustomed to winning and being in extremely competitive environments. It's not part of my nature to be mediocre or semi-committed. This ethos seems like one that Byrne Wallace would harness properly and professionally. It is this sense of excellence that most attracts me to Byrne Wallace and I hope to be highly considered for interview.

Yours Faithfully,

Tom Anders
